Litefoot is the first Native American to be represented in what has become the international phenomenon known as "Rap" music. Litefoot's road to achieving his goals rivals the most inspirational of success stories. It is a story of struggle, perseverance, self-belief, and overcoming seemingly insurmountable obstacles. He has become one of today's most well respected Native American entertainers and one of Native America's most recognizable national public figures. Litefoot is a modern day warrior from the Cherokee Nation.

As rap music has spread in popularity, to even the most remote of American Indian reservations, so has Litefoot's notoriety and popularity. He has independently released ten albums and has sold tens of thousands of these CD's to date. He is currently readying his 11th album for national distribution.

Litefoot has grown from his musical beginnings in Oklahoma to becoming an internationally known film and television actor starring in several feature films roles such as, The Indian in the Cupboard, Adaptation and Mortal Kombat, Annihilation. He has also appeared on the television programs: C.S.I. Miami, Family Law and Any Day Now.
